

THOUGHTLESS WARDENS.

Wardens McComb and Chambers of the San Quentin State Prison, careful as they may seem, have made a grave mistake in allowing the much petted "trusties" so many privileges near the armory. One prisoner carries a key daily to the gun chest, moving at all times among the worst convicts, and although a trusty he holds the lives of every guard in his hands, as in case of a break the chest could be thrown open and the contents would in a short time be belching death and destruction among the guards who take it upon themselves to allow the prisoners a few "privileges."

The inhabitants in that part of the country hold the management responsible for these thoughtless acts, and the impression exists among many of the best informed men that something must be done and done quickly, as it is a matter of self-preservation.

The APPEAL is compelled to remark, apropos of this development, that we can introduce the California Wardens to a man in this State who will put them onto the way to run a Prison with perfect security to the people living right in the building. His name is Frank McCullough and he manipulates the Nevada State Prison like clock-work.

Winters' Bad Luck.

The falling of the filly Norretta at Chicago and the killing of the jockey Abbas is another in the long series of ill-happenings that have fallen to the lot of the Winters stable. Last year Theodore Winters was considered the luckiest man on the turf. This season he is considered the most unlucky. If there is such a thing as a racing "hoodoo" it has taken up its abode in the Winters stable. The ill-luck began last fall at Westchester with the illness of El Rio Rey. That illness ruined him, for all the care that was given him after the stable went to Nashville was thrown away, and when all the expenses of wintering and training had been paid, a broken-down horse repaid them.

The two-year-olds of the Winters stable that left the ranch in Nevada in the spring were considered a superior lot, but they have not earned their training expenses yet, and there does not seem any likelihood of their winning their oats, the way they are running now. Winters sold one colt when in St. Louis and gave Don Jose away to some relatives. Neither of these have done anything, although Don Jose was a winner last year and did his part toward swelling the purse of his owner.

Joe Courtney has not come up to his form of last year by any means. The filly Norretta seemed a probable winner on the day of the unlucky race and she was backed heavily, only to trip in taking a desperate chance and kill her jockey. Winters even went to the extent of changing his trainers in order to get some improvement from his horses, but with the exception of Norretta the new man has made no showing yet.

A custom is springing up in this country of thanking people through the press for their attendance on the sick, at funerals, assistance rendered at festivals, etc., which we hope will be nipped in the bud. Such methods of thanking people are very unsatisfactory. It is the duty of friends to attend the sick and to attend the funerals of friends, and it is not necessary to publicly thank people for doing their duty. If anyone has rendered you a special favor thank him privately, either in person or by letter, and he will appreciate it much more than a general thanksgiving expressed in a general way through the press.—Ventura Free Press.
